Connecting to the modem port

Plug the other end of the RJ11 telephone cable into the modular jack of a standard voice-grade telephone line.

NOTE: For more detailed information regarding your computer's modem, visit Toshiba's Web site at toshiba.com.

Connecting your computer to a network

You can connect your computer to a network locally or remotely.

Locally, using the built-in Ethernet LAN adapter by connecting it to a standard RJ45 LAN line.

Remotely, using the built-in modem and a dial-up connection.

To set up the network connection, use the Network Setup Wizard:

Click Start and point to All Programs.

Point to Accessories, then to Communications, and click Network Setup Wizard.

Follow the on-screen instructions.

The computer connects with the network.
